

A Travelers Soliloquies takes you inside the mind of a waif. This Anthology is the waifs ten year poetic self-talks, illustrated! The art pieces by the author are the visual form of the poems that recount the memories of his genesis. These are his recorded self-dialogues as his mind hovers in the present - his caught in the moment thoughts and his vision of the future. At one point in life we leave our harbors and embark to a journey unknown. The waif succumbs to the will of change and trusts his destiny to lead him. The only reason a person leaves home is when he tries to find his own. This poet and artist is orphaned from his genesis in a different sense of being homeless: he embarked on a journey to find a home for the gift he was given and the gift he offers. And like a desolate soul a lonely waif I wait for you to find me. May your travels not take you long, Come fast and love me. His vision presage him for what is to come. He saw himself arriving to the right place at the right moment where his future holds. He also saw himself waiting at the right place at the right moment when his destiny arrives to accept the gift he offers. His greatest claim to his story is being ready, heart and soul in both instances, when he arrived and while he awaits. We can be both the one that awaits or somebody who arrives, either way we achieve a certain enlightenment for thereâ€™s no single moment in life thatâ€™s not connected to our destination.
