

Eight years ago, in 2008, Ron Howard directed the Oscar-nominated retelling of what are still the most popular political interviews to ever air on national TV. Frost/Nixon tells the story of 12 interviews performed by British talk-show host David Frost with the former President Nixon. The interviews were performed three years after Nixon had made history by becoming the first United States president to ever resign from office. Then, in the interviews, Nixon did something else a president never does – admit guilt on national TV. Note: You can listen to this story for free at <http://www.basedonatruestorypodcast.com>.
